SLETER'S  TELEGRAPIMC CODE,  $x * * * *$ $x$ ov

THIRD EDITION.

SLATER'S CODE.

Short Explanation of Slater's System of Secret correspondence.

This is a Telegraphic Dictionary of the English Language, in which every word is numbered.

The method of using it is by means of a variable or Key-No., previously understood between correspondents, and agreed to be added to or deducted from the number in the Dictionary of the word telegraphed.

Thus a numbered "Code-Word" is telegraphed to signify another numbered "Code-Word" not telegraphed, but indicated by the Key-No.

It is obvious that the meaning of a Telegraphic Message or Written Despatch, cannot be discovered without the Key-No.

This Code may be used for either Telegraphic or Written Messages by different correspondents, with distinct and individual secrecy for each, by the allotment of a separate Key-No. to each, to be counted backwards or forwards, and varied at pleasure ; it is a simple but effectual system to conceal the meaning of MSS., or Telegraphic Messages from intrusive perusal ; it may be made intelligible to only one person or any number ; it is equally useful for Political, Commercial or Social Purposes, and used in conjunction with existing cipher or Government Codes, it is invaluable to Principals and Heads of Departments for the more important Private Correspondence or Telegraphic Despatches.

This Code is not intended so much to supersede existing Codes which may be already in use by Private Firms or Government Offices, but rather to be employed with them as a Master-Key-Code, affording assurance of absolute Secrecy far beyond that of any Cipher or One-Word-Method, of which the meaning is often discovered by accident, access or frequent employment of certain symbolic words, noticed to be followed by invariable and similar results.

With this Code the clerk may "wire the Telcgram," or the bearer of the letter read it openly without the slightest clue to the meaning of the contents.

INTRODUCTION.

On the ist February, 1870, the telegraph system throughout the United Kingdom passes into the hands of the Government, who will work the lines by Post Office officials. In other words, those who have hitherto so judiciously and satisfactorily managed the delivery of our sealed letters will in future be entrusted also with the transmission and delivery of our open letters in the shape of telegraphic communications, which will thus be exposed not only to the gaze of public officials, but from the necessity of the case must be read by them. Now in large or small communities (particularly perhaps in the latter) there are always to be found prying spirits, curious as to the affairs of their neighbours, which they think they can manage so much better than the parties chiefly interested, and proverbially inclined to gossip.

With every disposition on the part of the Post Office authorities to work the telegraphs in such a manner as shall command the confidence of the public, and justify them in entrusting their dispatches to them,-and this disposition certainly exists in no ordinary degree,-the community will frequently have occasion to employ the telegraph in the transmission of messages which they will be most anxious to forward in such terms as shall be unintelligible to the operators through whose hands they pass. Already ir the transmission of commercial intelligence it has been found absolutely necessary to conceal the news communicated from all but the receivers of the messages, and particularly is this the case in the instance of submarine cables, whilst an additional reason for the employment of apparently unintelligible messages is found in the charges of submarine cables, which has rendered those using them alive to the fact that, by a well-selected code, one word or figure may be made to represent much more than it expresses.

The compiler of the present vocabulary would draw attention to the fact that by his system messages can be communicated in a form unintelligible to the operator, and can be sent either in the form of unconnected words or of series of figures, whilst either the words or the figures can be used in conjunction with a prearranged code. The simplicity of the mode of using the vocabulary is a great advantage which cannot fail to be evident to those employing it, whilst the numerous combinations of which the vocabulary is capable gives those using it the means of selecting upwards of a million different keys, thus effectually concealing their messages from all but those with whom a key has been pre-arranged. In the following pages the mode of using the work is illustrated, and, for a reason which will be more evident on reading page xiv., one sentence has been adopted throughout, showing how an alteration of the system of the key will vary the message.

The vocabulary embraces from A to Z 24000 words, in addition to which 1000 more words have been added, expressing Christian names, some surnames in common use, the names of heathen deities, heroes, &c., and some geographical names, all of which are so arranged that they may be used advantageously in code messages. They thus afford in themselves some clue to any error which may possibly creep into messages during transit, for even telegraph operators, skilful as they are, are fallible; besides which earth currents at times act in such a subtle manner during the transmission of a message that the signals may be mis-read, and a different value be ascribed to them by the reader-off from that which was actually given in as it were to the wire by the sender.

The following examples commence with a simple form of cipher, viz., by the addition and then by the subtraction of a pre-arranged number, afterwards by the transposition of the numbers, then in a more complex form by the combination of these two methods, and finally by a variation in the series of figures, whereby it will be seen that one and the same word in a sentence does not by any means involve the necessity for employing the same cipher, thus almost entirely preventing the possibility of a message being deciphered by those skilful investigators who by long practice have acquired wondrous facility in reading off messages which the senders had hoped were concealed from all the world but those they were intended for. The sentence selected for illustration in the following pages is -
"The Queen is the supreme power in the Realm."

EXAMPLE $I$.

The Queen is the supreme power in the Realm.

Add any number below 25000 (say, for instance,) 5555 to the numbers opposite to those words it is desired to transmit. Where the result exceeds 25000 , deduct that number, or, in other words, commence the alphabet again.

Further examples are unnecessary, as the reader will readily see from the preceding, that a very large number of keys, amounting to some millions in number, may be employed, besides which others can be arranged by using the numbers at the head of the pages, folios, or sheets of four pages, taking advantage or not of the words in each column, which are arranged in fifties. The ingenuity of those making use of the book may be exercised in devising these. For further information, however, the number of words under each letter is here subjoined:-
